Search Pilot Clinic

For nearly 40 years, the Montana Department of Transportation (MDT) Aeronautics Division has held a search pilot clinic to train volunteer pilots to search for missing aircraft.

This year, the structure has changed with the search pilot clinic. Now, participating pilots and observers will receive a day and a half of ground instruction relating to electronic flight bag use, search practices, safety, terrain considerations, how the incident command system operates, and responsibilities of searchers. Dual flight instruction in the volunteer's aircraft will occur later, with an MDT Aeronautics Division-approved flight instructor and training syllabus.

This change is to allow more flexibility to volunteers to conduct their flight training at more regular intervals in their own aircraft. Additionally, volunteers will be selected based on geographic needs for search aircraft throughout the state.

This training is open to volunteer aircraft owners/pilots and observers who are committed to being available when search services are needed.

Participants will be selected based on the type of aircraft they own, their geographic location in Montana, experience, and their availability to serve in the volunteer search and rescue network after their training is completed.

The training is also open to volunteer observers who will be trained to look for signs of a crash site and gain experience in documenting positions, altitudes, and communicating to the ground.

MDT Aeronautics Division staff will select up to 25 qualified candidates to attend the course.

The course will be held August 8 to 9 in Helena at the Fairfield Inn. There will be no charge for those selected to participate in the training program. Up to two nights of lodging will be provided, if needed. Most meals will also be included.

New First Aid/Survival Skills Course

The MDT Aeronautics Division is offering a new training course to Montana pilots. The course is one day, and will focus on basic first aid and survival skills as they relate to aviation. The classroom setting course will prepare participants to take their new skills in the field.

The Peak from Butte will provide expert instruction from military pararescuemen and other former military special forces instructors. This program was developed after the MDT Aeronautics Division received numerous requests for this type of training from aircraft owners and pilots across Montana. You asked, we listened, and we're happy to answer the call!

It is unique to find aviation specific emergency training in the civilian world. Growing training opportunities like this can make all the difference in an emergency situation.

This new program will help to develop fundamental life-saving skills which could have a major impact in achieving positive emergency outcomes.

The course will be held September 20 in Helena at the Double Tree by Hilton from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Lunch will be provided. The cost to attend the course is $75. Capacity is limited, so be sure to register now!

West Yellowstone Airport Field Trip

In an adventure on May 29, students from West Yellowstone embarked on a field trip to the West Yellowstone Airport. The trip aimed to provide elementary students with a glimpse into the world of aviation by giving them an immersive experience of daily life at their local airport.

The students began their journey by visiting the airline ticket counter, where they each received a pretend boarding pass. They proceeded through the security checkpoint, where they observed the inner workings of the luggage x-ray machine and metal detector.

The students were introduced to basic marshaling signals by airline ramp agents. They learned how ground crew members direct aircraft safely on the tarmac. A local sightseeing airplane and an air ambulance helicopter were on hand for students to explore as well as airport fire trucks with water cannons, which students had a chance to operate.

The day wrapped up with a glider flying contest, local ice cream, and students trying their hand at MDT Aeronautics Division's flight simulators.

MDT Aeronautics Division and its staff take great pride in supporting students across the state and fostering passion for aviation. Field trips like these can spark curiosity and inspire young minds to consider a future career in the aviation field.

Meet Yellowstone Airport's Summer Intern

Yellowstone Airport is excited to welcome Jordan Deafenbaugh to the team for the 2024 season. Jordan will be working alongside the airport manager and operations specialists during the summer months to provide support and gain insights into the day-to-day operations of the Yellowstone Airport.

Jordan is a student at Purdue University in West Lafayette, Indiana. He is going to be a senior majoring in aviation management with a specialization in airport management and operations. Jordan is a member of Purdue's American Association of Airport Executives chapter.

After graduation, Jordan plans to pursue a career in airport operations and eventually work for the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) as an airport certification safety inspector.

Jordan is excited to learn more about airport operations this summer and contribute to the continued success of the Yellowstone Airport and the State of Montana.

Aeronautics Loan & Grant Applications Open

As a reminder to airport loan and grant applicants, the loan and grant online portal will accept FY 2026 applications starting July 1, through November 15.

If you cannot enter the website, you may have a previous award that needs a closeout form or an annual status report filed.

Projects must be broken down by type and itemized on the application. For example, asphalt projects should be broken down by runway, apron, and taxiway, not as one project lumped together.

If you have any questions or need assistance with the loan and grant program, please contact Stephen Torske at 406-444-9569 or storske@mt.gov.
